

College Board Announces Cancellation of June SAT

The College Board announced on April 15th that the administration of the June SAT has been cancelled. They plan to resume live testing on August 29, with weekend SAT administrations every month through 2020. Students can register for the new test dates starting in May.

If schools do not reopen in August, the College Board will provide a digital SAT to students at home beginning in September.

The College Board and Khan Academy will continue to provide free resources online, including full-length practice tests and personalized learning tools.
